Save $14!

Now $75.95

Self-disclosure is a very hot, current topic. Rich with detailed case material, the book tackles such compelling questions as: • When and how self-revelation can enhance healing and change • What types of disclosure may be harmful • Why either party may fail to reveal important information • The impact on disclosure of race, gender, cultural, and sexual orientation • How to use disclosure to strengthen the therapeutic relationship • Special considerations involved in disclosing to children.

A separate chapter discusses supervision, covering how supervisors and supervisees decide what to share with each other, what kinds of disclosures each is likely to find helpful or unhelpful, and how this issue affects the quality of the alliance and the work that is accomplished.

TOWARD A NEW DIAGNOSTIC SYSTEM FOR CHILD PSYCHOPATHOLOGY

by Peter S. Jensen, MD, et al.

6 CE credits

9053

Now! $79.95

This important volume brings together leading, child psychiatrists to critically evaluate the DSM-IV and work toward new, more clinically useful ways of understanding childhood problems. This book argues that many disorders of childhood reflect problems in adaptation, the impact of adverse experiences, or a mismatch between the child's developmental needs and the resources available in the environment. Yet the existing diagnostic system rooted in adult disorders, is static—it fails to account for the ways children shape and are shaped by their changing contexts and relationships. The result is a timely and authoritative work that should be read by any forward-thinking clinician or researcher in the field.

HEART DISEASE (90 p.) #9040

by Judith A. Skala, RN, PhD, Kenneth E. Freedland, PhD,
Robert M. Carney, PhD

4 CE credits

$66.95

Cardiovascular disease is the most active area of research in behavioral medicine. This research is published across a wide array of journals, making it difficult for busy clinicians to keep up with new developments in the field. Thus, one of the biggest challenges today is translating the latest findings in behavioral cardiology into clinical practice. This volume is intended to make these findings accessible to psychologists, physicians, and other professionals who work with cardiac patients. It provides recommendations that are grounded both in research and in clinical practice.

TREATING ALCOHOL AND DRUG PROBLEMS IN PSYCHOTHERAPY PRACTICE #9100 (336p.)

by Arnold M. Washton, PhD; Joan E. Zweben, PhD

6 CE credits

$68.95

Written specifically for the office-based psychotherapist, this practical guide describes how to detect, assess, diagnose, and treat clients presenting with a range of alcohol and drug problems. Detailed is an integrated, flexible psychotherapeutic approach that emphasizes building a strong therapeutic relationship, engaging clients "where they are," and addressing substance use within the larger context of clients' lives. The authors describe in very pragmatic terms how to use a combination of motivational, cognitive-behavioral, 12-step, and psychodynamic techniques with clients in different stages of change. Helpful appendices include reproducible patient forms and handouts.

$17!

This is a practical and engaging resource that shows psychologists how to apply the principles of the APA Ethics Code (2002) to the ethical dilemmas that they encounter in their daily lives. Each ethical standard is reproduced in its entirety. Then it is translated into everyday language and is followed by a fictional case study that illustrates how the standard might be applied to a real-life situation. Examples of both problematic and exemplary behavior in diverse settings are provided. Some of the issues covered: professional competence, human relations, privacy and confidentiality, advertising and other public statements, recordkeeping and fees, education and training, research and publication, assessment, and therapy.

$74.95

New!

Save
$15!

This groundbreaking volume synthesizes the results of the Virginia Adult Twin Study of Psychiatric and Substance Use Disorders, which yielded longitudinal data on more than 9,000 individuals. The authors trace how risk for depression, anxiety, eating disorders, antisocial behavior, alcoholism, and substance abuse emerges from the interplay of a variety of genetic and environmental influences. Major questions addressed include whether risk is disorder-specific, how to distinguish between correlational and casual genetic and environmental factors, sex differences in risk, and how risk protective factors interact over time.

This manual presents for the first time a purely cognitive approach to treating obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD). This approach avoids the highly distressing exposure component of exposure and response prevention therapy (ERP) that is commonly used to treat the symptoms of OCD. Not only does this cognitive therapy (CT) approach open up the option of psychotherapy to those OCD sufferers who resist exposure-based therapy, it also holds great promise for treating OCD sufferers with mental rituals as well as those who struggle concurrently with depression, anxiety, and other symptoms.

MOTIVATING SUBSTANCE ABUSERS TO ENTER TREATMENT #9112
by Jane E. Smith, PhD; Robert J. Meyers, PhD
